

Prosthetic eye services offered at Deatherage Certified Opticians

John Trawnik, Greg Deatherage, and Randy Trawnik are shown in the retail display area of Deatherage Certified Opticians in Parker Square.

Providing service above and beyond the norm has always been true at Deatherage Certified Opticians, conveniently located at 2916 Garnett in Parker Square.

One of the "extra" services provided by owner Greg Deatherage is eye prosthetics. Instead of patients traveling to Dallas for their prosthetic eye care, Greg invited William Randall Trawnik and John Randall Trawnik of Dallas Eye Prosthetics to treat patients each month here in Wichita Falls.

Randy Trawnik is nationally and internationally acclaimed for his outstanding work in Ophthalmic Prosthetics. He also is well known for his pioneering work in Prosthetic Management of Congenital Anophthalmos and Microphthalmos.

In addition to his private practice, Randy works as associate clinical instructor for the Department of Ophthalmology/UTSW Medical School and is a sought-after lecturer for numerous medical associations. He trained with noted pioneer ophthalmologist John H. O'Donnell and has a Master of Ophthalmic Prosthetics from the American Society of Ocularists (ASO). Randy has more than 30 years of experience in the eye prosthetics field.

Randy and his son, John, meet with patients once a month at Deatherage Certified Opticians. "We work with Greg and area eye surgeons," explained Randy. "There is a distinct need here for those who can't easily travel to Dallas. We have known Greg for several years and know that he is very service-oriented provider."

They offer the finest in custom ocular and scleral shell prosthetics for patients of all ages. "We pride ourselves in treating our patients with respect, compassion, and understanding. We realize that the ocular prosthetic procedure is an important step in recovery after an eye loss. Our level of personal professional care and commitment to quality is second to none."
